A “Delhi's National IMA President's Pen” (By invitation)

As National IMA celebrated its 100th National Conference this month, DMA is honored to invite (in sequence) its only 2 Past IMA National Presidents (from Delhi) amidst us today for their Words of Wisdom. Both of them have been stalwarts of the medical profession with decades of experience and immense contribution to the medical profession.

In this issue we have invited Dr. Sanjiv Malik, Past National President, IMA (2006) to share his journey, his thoughts, experiences and advise for the medical profession in today's scenario.

The Medical Profession: Yesterday, Today & Tomorrow

As I reminisce my journey and experiences in the medical profession, I am filled with nostalgic memories of yester years.

As the founder secretary of the students Union of my then newly founded medical college (UCMS), I had the distinction of leading multiple agitations for recognition of the college to its proper amalgamation with the associated hospital. Later as the founder president of DMSA (Delhi Medical Students Association), we led the massive 1977-78 strike for betterment of the conditions for Delhi resident doctors and interns. The strike was reminiscent of major unity amongst medical student and resident doctors.

As I commenced my medical practice in 1980, I had the privilege of enrolling myself as a primary member of the Indian medical Association. I was least aware that one day I would have the privilege of leading this august body as its National President.

The decades from 1980 to early 2000's were eras where major health care services in Delhi and also around the country were provided by major premier governmental medical institutions. To get admission in a private ward in AIIMS, Delhi was a privilege. As healthcare progressed and advanced the private healthcare industry (I'm taking the liberty of calling it an “industry”) grew and proliferated. What started initially in select metropolis of the country has today grown across the length and breadth of the country. This rapid privatization has put India on the global health map and amongst the top global destinations for health tourism. This undoubtedly has brought the latest advances in healthcare to the people of the country. It also however has had its challenges. The recent years have seen healthcare industry going in the hands of private business entrepreneurs, venture capital funds and the like. The healthcare priorities and goals in these institutions are defined today more by ambitious, target driven MBA's than by healthcare professionals. Erosion of public faith in the healthcare system and the medical profession has become a rapidly developing phenomenon. This is a cause of concern.

While we must acknowledge the positives that have come with the growth of the private sector, it is the duty of professional leaders and brand ambassador doctors to ensure that we do not come succumb to unethical, undue pressures of what is now an industry driven business. It is the brand leaders of the profession who would lead the journey for maintaining ethical medical practices and the resultant delicate, pious fabric of doctor-patient relationship.

Another aspect is what we ought to have as a stand towards mixing of different pathies in the modern system of medicine. While the government seems to be keen on this, IMA needs to logically make an in-depth study of its pros and cons and come up with a detailed white paper on what the professional body and professionals feel. It can't be that organization's like IMA openly oppose the same and major medical institutions of the country adopt it. Our approach, decision and thinking in this matter needs to be logical and based on strong scientific evidence. It's only then that the lawmakers of the country would give us our due hearing.

On the professional front while we must keep abreast with all the latest developments, I must mention that AI would become a driving force for technology including healthcare of the future. Our professional brethren must keep themselves updated on aspects of artificial intelligence. It is equally the responsibility of medical associations to ensure that adequate coverage is given to imparting knowledge on AI to our professional colleagues.

Lot of challenges which faced the medical profession yesterday continue facing the profession today. From time to time, we do hear great noise about the same. While some of the basic issues facing day to day practitioners have remained unsolved, I feel the need of the hour is unconditional unity of the medical profession and a common stand towards our problems. Like all democratic organizations we also have the structure of electoral politics. While elections cannot be wished away in a democratic set up, they should not go beyond elections. Let those who wish to be a part of the electoral process be so and the day the process is over the opposing/contesting factions should forget differences and be one for the sake of solving day to day problems faced by practitioners. It is only then that we will be able to find a solution to some of the long overdue pending problems challenging the profession.

With my best wishes for a very happy and healthy New Year.

Warm regards,

Dr. Sanjiv Malik
Past National President, IMA (2006)
